CARINI WALLS

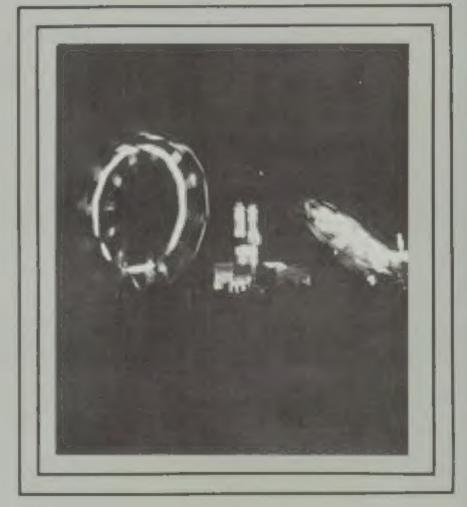

The carnival men cry out and sing Toss the ring. shoot a round. The ferris wheels sway and swing. The carousel horses plunge around. In a circle they come and go, And here you are. says the carnival man. Walking around to catch the show. Which is show and which is you?

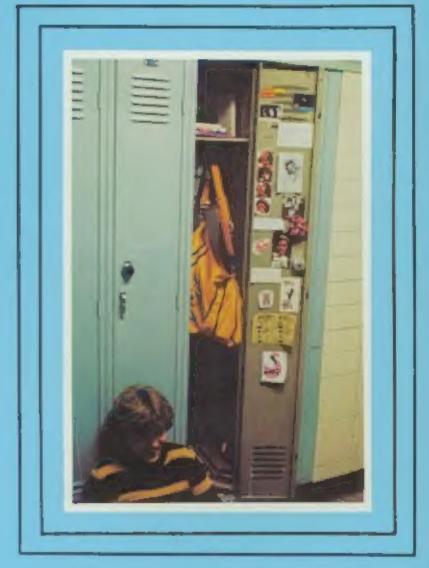

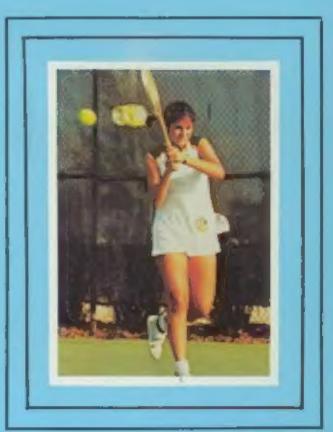

Carnival confusion is, as always, evident on the international scene. Countries conduct foreign affairs as we drive bumper cars, full speed ahead without understanding what we do or who we affect. The assassination of Anwar Sadat pours more oil on the already burning Middle East. In Europe, fears grow that Reagan's strong anti-Soviet stand will bring war. The whole world watches Poland with admiration and anxiety as the brave members of Solidarity stand up to their Russian colleagues.

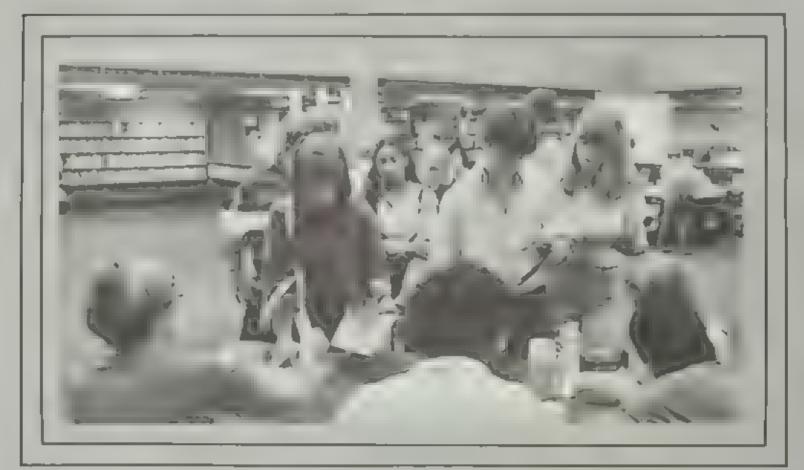

Like the carnival Scrambier, American politics is constantly changing direction The election of Ronald Reagan heralded the beginning of the most conservative presidency in 20 years. His promise -- to revive the sinking economy by balancing the budget and cutting income taxes. In the center ring is David Stockman, OMB director. With sleight of hand quicker than a magician's, he makes entire feder al programs disappear. But m litary buildup, including expensive projects such as the B I and the MX, threatens to burst the budget at its seams. With baited breath, we watch this highwire balancing act, hoping it will be successfu-

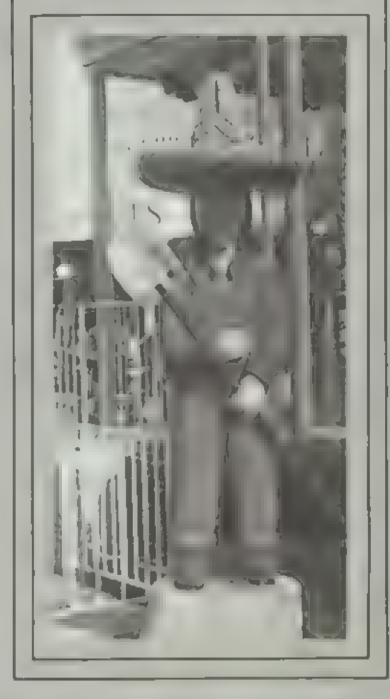

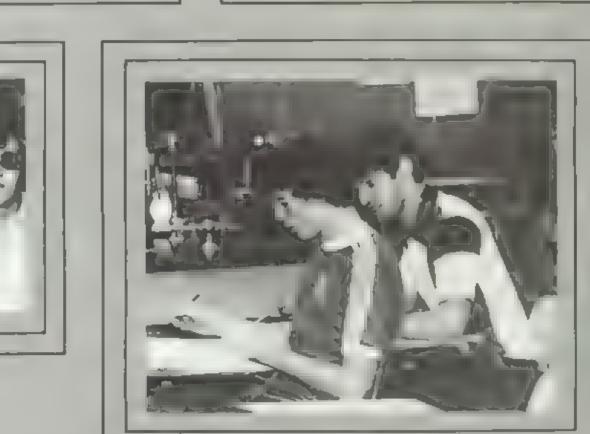

Chicago is a carnival of culture right next door, it draws us like a magnet. A weekend downtown becomes a must-shopping at Water Tower Place, lunch at Pizzaria Uno. and a play at the Schubert. With the success. of the Sting, we can forget the Bears (baby and grown) and feel a pride in "our" town, even though we discover we must break a five for train fare to get there. Between Chicago politics and rising inflation, the RTA and the Chicago schools stand poised on the brink of financial disaster. John Cardinal Cody also faces troubled times, riding the tight wire of troubled finance, while Jane Byrne, with a spotlight all her own, rides the roller coaster of public opinion from crisis to Crisis

What happens in the world around us is of ten beyond our scope and control, but Lake Forest High School is our own carnival, our own show. From the frosh Buzzy Bee to the senior American Eagle, we master the increasingly difficult twists and turns of our high school lives. This year brings change as usual. A new track is being added at East and an old Western favorite appears in danger of being closed. But change presents challenge and challenge brings growth.

THE SHOW IS US! ON WITH THE SHOW!

RIDING THROUGH

THE YEAR'S

HOMECOMING 1981

The carousel of time brought us another homecoming this year, but it was truly a horse of quite a different color. The long lived tradition of a parade and floats was banished, to be replaced by a whole schedule of new ideas.

The Scouts ceremoniously roasted a Bison at the Friday night bonfire, led by "Chief" Tommy Meyers. The competitive spirit was retained through the door, window and hall decorating contests, with the class of '82 finally capturing a title (best wall) before graduation. Lunch time activities included a balloon toss and tug-of-war, (with the out-tugged juniors demanding a rematch)

Beth Bruckman, Homecoming Queen, reigned over the all-school pep raily, considered by most to be a highly successful spirit raiser.

Due to rain, halftime activities at Saturday's football game against the Bisons were limited but Lake Forest was victorious, winning 6-0

The day concluded with an informal dance, living up to its name, "Morp" (truly the opposite of prom)

Theatre West was proud to present as its fall play Enid Bagnold's. The Chalk Garden." The plot concerned an undisciplined child who was transformed into a beautiful young lady with the aid of a very special woman whose story also unfolded in the course of the play. Not only did the cast have to memorize their lines, but also the English dialect of the play's setting.

A carnival atmosphere prevailed as 'Godspell' marked the premier of an entirely new lighting system and reworked sound system. Rehearsing for weeks in near darkness, the show emerged from a confusing morass of broken wires, old dimmers, undisciplined fog, extended funchtimes, and nonfunctioning spotlights into a real celebration of technical wizardry, under the direction of Gary Pennella, Four crew veterans were actually in the cast while the rest of the crew stayed out of sight. Eric Schnell took charge of a very large One Act crew, And Gary used his considerable influence, good looks and not unattractive knees to assemble an enthusiastic group

This year's production of Jon-Michael Tebelak's musical, "Godspell", was an outstanding piece of original artistic device. With the great help of Jay Criche and student director Adam Lazarus 'Godspell' combined special effects, complicated dialogue and beautifully performed song and dance numbers into a moving play. Donned in white Billy Dallman was a humorous and sensitive Jesus Christ. The rest of the 22 actors and actresses generated energy and talent through one big production number after another. All remained on stage for virtually the whole play, proving themselves to be very versatile performers; each strong in voice, dance and drama. Sandy Ragsdale choreographed the musical, using the aisles to surround the audience in music and song. As our "savior" was carried out, we wondered about the true nature of the forces beyond. And, keeping in line with the original story. Jesus rose from the bed to be back in school on Monday morning

We all know that school can be a pretty frightening experience at times, with final exams, semester grades and tyranical teachers. This year we received an extra thrill for our money as we witnessed the various assortment of creatures wandering the halls on Halloween. The old standby ghouls were there, along with a cast of originals. The costume didn't matter—anything to frighten the day was welcome.

During Spirit Week '82

Once again this year, with finals and first semester behind us, the high school hosted its third annual Spirit Week. Aided by charimen Brian Addy and Beth McEl wain. Student Councils at West and East put together their own array of themes Among these were the class themes of: fifties frosh soph, slumber, jun, junkies and senior superheroes Prizes were awarded for the best costume of the day, and the week ended with a basketball game and dance Hopefully more kids will be gin to participate in the week, making it a welcome bright spot in the mid-winter

The English dept. teaches us the "true meaning" of many things. This knowledge comes in handy at places like a sideshow, where people use big words (also taught by this dept.) because they are trying to impress us and make us think that things or people are better than they really are. But WE know better. So remember, this magnificent literary achievement. you are now holding was brought to you by a sagacious expressive group of editors and staff at an extremis of creativity

Once Upon A Time . . .

We've finally arrived at the nostalgia section of this year's FOREST TRAILS. All of these members of the faculty are still here at LFHS, and we're fairly sure that everyone will recognize them. However, in the tradition of carnival guessing games, we've only given their initials as a means of identifying them. We hope that everyone has fun with this little idea, including our gracious faculty

Writing the program for the 1981-82 carnival of events were the editors and staff of THE FOREST SCOUT. This year's staff was unique in that it was comprised mainly of juniors. However, editor-in-chief Karla Schulte stressed professionalism in format and content. The whole team pulled together to produce a very polished school paper

Aside from the hours of individual rehearsal, these dedicated club members also spent Saturdays traveling to various schools to attend National Forensic League competitions. They participated all the way up to the state level. Under Mr. Ferry's direction, they did a fine job of representing LFHS showmanship

RADIO CLUB is the group act responsible for WLFH. Not only did these deejays provide high quality music eight periods a day, but they also kept us posted on student announcements. This year Gary Pennella served as program director, with Tim McM Ilan as coordinator, under the sponsorship of Ms. Elmore and Mr. Miller

"But what does it all mean?" ask the members of Philosophy Club. This group concerned itself with the issues behind the carnival scenes, and met once a week in Mr. Hawkins' room to discuss them. Some topics raised were God, love relationships, and boredom. The lively exchange of ideas allowed club members to walk away from every meeting with something to think about

A carnival of numbers! That describes MATH CLUB S activities this year With Mr. Doubet as club advisor students from all grades who enjoy math had the chance to participate in the Atiantic-Pacific Mathematics competition. Speakers addressing such subjects as Rubik's cube and Boolean Algebra were also featured events.

The goals of DEBATE, according to club sponsor Mr. Richards, are a) to enhance one's speaking ability b) to become articulate, c) to learn to think logically, and mostly d) to enjoy oneself. LFHS debaters, a small traveling circus in themselves accomplished all these goals attending tournaments at U of I, U of W, NIU, Bradley and Northwestern

Ryan Stoll was undefeated until the State Meet, where he was nosed out of the state title by seven-tenths of a second. Stoll, Wisner, and Helberg were named to the All-Lake County team

The girls' cross country team earned its reputation as the North Suburban Conterence's most improved team with a second place finish. With a conference record of five wins and one loss, the team's "fun" runs, hill work, speed work, and weight training clearly paid off. Although the team failed to make it to sectionals Alexa Follensbee did go as an individual runner. Cross-country is not a team sport the usual sense of the word, however, the talent, hard work and enthusiasm of all the girls were essential to the team's fine performance.

The Intramural Athletics system continued to offer interested students a chance to participate in athletice without giving up as much of their time as a Varsity sport demands. The Intraumural program offers students programs in Touch Football Soccer, Softball, Floor Hockey and Basketball

Under the leadership of Lloyd Atwell, the Intramural Program has been running smoothly as in past years. The Program requires students not only to organize teams and practices, but also to provide the needed officiating. This not only increases their physical strongpoints but also teaches them responsibility and teamwork

Attempting new feats

Not afraid to fall

Lake Forest High School's Outdoor Education program gives students an opportunity to apply new skills while at the same time learning to work together as a group. Units covered include biking, canoeing, rock climbing and repelling, survival skills (i.e. cooking without a micro-wave), riflery, and cross country skiing

The Devil's Lake field trip highlights the course each semester by giving the students a chance to try their talents on climbs and repels of varying difficulties. Aside from the bad jokes and occasionally bad weather, the trip holds challenges for all. Unfortunately, H. Keller was "on-belay" and missed this year's picture

Headed by Skip Atwell, the course requires a sincere and interested approach, along with a willingness to always at least try

Yearbook Editorial Board-Slayers of deadlines. Without this group of students, the book would not be possible. Their dedication. and willingness to sacrifice weekends are what make "Forest Trails" great. And then there is the "real" editorial board, as seen on the facing page. Todd, who will stop at nothing to succeed, engages in some back-stabbing; but Greg is too engrossed in plans for his next trip to Wisco to notice. Meanwhile Steve and Stacey are "developing" some kinky ideas. "Most difficult to get a picture of" Lisa Considine finally turned up in our archives. And the Asst. Editor in Charge of Copy has unearthed a relic from Mrs. Silber's past. Whitney isn't at all self-conscious about having her picture taken, but Sarah is skeptical. And finally, the only serious (?) board member, Betsy, asks Mrs. Silber the eternaquestion, "What is a good caption for this picture?"
